May Program

Break the Barriers to Fair Housing in Southern California

Wednesday, May 6, 2009 @ 7:00 p.m

There will be a presentation of a slate of nominations to serve on the Board of Directors for 2009-2010. Please see page 2 for the slate of nominations and how members of CHSSC can submit additional nominations

After the business meeting will be a presentation by Bill Chin, broker and realtor. He will talk about breaking the barriers to fair housing in Southern California. Restrictive covenants had prevented many minorities including Chinese Americans from buying or renting a home in many neighborhoods. In the late '40's and early '50's, the legal barriers were beginning to be removed, but political and social barriers still existed.

That was the environment that a young Bill Chin found when he moved to Southern California from his native Detroit. Bill Chin had obtained his Bachelor of Business Administration in Marketing from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

He joined Kashu Realty, a pioneering real estate agency, and over the subsequent years, helped many Asian American and other families buy a home in the Crenshaw and other previously inaccessible areas.

Still active in and enjoying his profession, Bill Chin will share his insights from over 50 years in the real estate industry. He has been a Director, Member of the Executive Committee, and President of the Los Angeles Association of Realtors, and has been recognized with numerous awards, including by his peers, the Board of Supervisors, and the California State Assembly.

Ch'ing Ming at the Evergreen Cemetery

This year's CHSSC Ch'ing Ming observance was attended by almost 100 people. The day began at the Los Angeles Crematorium with a presentation on the memorial plaque to be dedicated to the forgotten Chinese pioneers of Los Angeles with the hope that they will always be remembered. The group then walked to the Chinese Shrine where a Ch'ing Ming ceremony was performed, and was followed by a dim sum feast with a roast pig.

Members of the Boyle Height Historical Society joined CHSSC members and friends for the day. After the feast, they visited a few gravesites, notably the site where Donaldina Cameron was buried. Miss Cameron was a social justice advocate who devoted her life to the rescuing and education of as many as 3,000 Chinese girls and women in San Francisco from 1895 to 1934 (see article on page 6).

The day's events was organized by Gilbert Hom. Linda Chong, Gordon Hom, Gene Moy, Susan Dickson, Irvin Lai and several others also helped. Irvin Lai and Susan Dickson ordered food and organized the luncheon feast.

MISSION STATEMENT

The Chinese Historical Society of Southern California was organized in November, 1975. The purposes of the Society are: 1) to bring together people with a mutual interest in the important history and historical role of Chinese and Chinese Americans in Southern California; 2) to pursue, preserve and communicate knowledge of this history; and; 3) to promote the heritage of the Chinese and Chinese American community in support of a better appreciation of the rich, multi-cultural society of the United States.

New Books on Chinese American Experience

at the Chinese Playground by Kathleen S. Yep is a new publication of the Temple University Press.

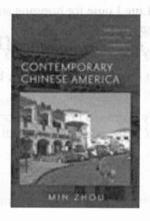

OUTSIDE THE PAINT focuses on San Francisco's Chinatown from the 1930s to the 1950s, when basketball was a source of pride and temporary relief from an oppressive lifestyle for the Chinese community. Through Yep's retelling of five particular stories ranging from the success of the Mei Wahs, a women's amateur basketball team, to the individual achievements of the talented Helen Wong, this book captures just how male and female athletes alike used their physical attributes to challenge their social status and build community.

"Prodigiously researched and vividly realized,
Outside the Paint tells a story previously all but unknown. Kathleen Yep has made an important contribution to the scholarship of the city game."

—Jeremy Schaap, New York Times best-selling author

Contemporary Chinese America, by Min Zhou, is a comprehensive sociological investigation of the experiences of Chinese immigrants to the United States—and of their offspring—in the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries. The concluding chapter, "Rethinking Assimilation," talks about the paradox of "Model Minority" and "Perpetual Foreigner." Also included are an extensive bibliography and a list of recommended documentary films.

While this book is suited for a college class in Chinese American studies, it is also interesting to the general audience who wants to better understand the experience of the contemporary Chinese Americans.

"Through her sociological insight, Zhou's new book deepens our understanding of many aspects of contemporary Chinese America such as family, education, or enclave economy. Pushing the field to a new level, her scholarship is a must in race, ethnicity, and immigration studies."

—Haiming Liu, Professor of Asian American Studies, Cal Poly Pomona

Min Zhou is Professor of Sociology and Asian American Studies at the University of California, Los Angeles. She is the author of Chinatown (Temple) and The Transformation of Chinese America, co-author of Growing Up American, and co-editor of Asian American Youth and Contemporary

Corrections to News 'n Notes April 2009 edition, Johnny Yee article:

"George Yee did not serve in the US military, but he was indeed a past president of the CHSSC. The youngest of the Yee brothers, Bill Yee is an active and long serving member of the CHSSC, along with his wife Margie. Moreover, Bill was formally a Manager with the Savon Drugs Group, which is among other things, a retailer of American flags. Many of the American flags in John Yee's collection, and subsequently donated to the CHSSC, were from Bill's store."

An Appeal for Donations to the May 3 Fundraising Event

While CHSSC's 34th anniversary dinner is almost sold out, costs have gone up and donations have been less than in previous years. Please support CHSSC by making a donation using the form on the next page.

In the past 34 years our core activities included a monthly speaker program, a monthly newsletter, journals and books on Chinese American experiences that enhance the understanding of Chinese Americans contribution to the development of United States. We have collaborated with the Asian American Studies Center, University of California at Los Angeles, in a conference, an oral history workshop and publication of a book on Chinese American veterans of WWII. We participated in activities that protects the Chinese American history from being destroyed, forgotten, distorted or dismissed as unimportant. We also have a scholarship program for those pursuing studies in Chinese American history.

In order to continue our mission we need your generous donations of any amount. The annual dinner is CHSSC's only major fundraising event. It raises the necessary operating expenses for the next fiscal year. We accept donations any time of the year, for either general operation or any specific activity such as education, outreach or publication.

Please visit our website at www.chssc.org, come to our monthly speaker program (see page 1), or visit CHSSC Heritage Center at 411 Bernard Street in Los Angeles Chinatown. For more information, call

Donaldina Cameron, c. 1930

Donaldina Cameron was born in 1869 on a sheep ranch in New Zealand. She and her family emigrated to California when she was 2 years old. In 1895, Donaldina was persuaded by an old family friend to spend a year helping out at the Presbyterian Mission House in San Francisco's Chinatown. In 1895 she became a sewing teacher working for the Mission House's superintendent, Maggie Culbertson. Two years later, Miss Culbertson died and Donaldina Cameron became the director until her retirement in 1934.

Donaldina rescued girls and women who were kidnapped or sold in China, then brought to the U.S. and forced to work as domestics and prostitutes in brutally abusive circumstances. To those who lost their "slaves", she was "Fahn Quai," which means foreign devil or white devil and to those recued girls and women she was "Lo Ma" which means "old mother."

When Donaldina first arrived at the home, she was untrained and naïve but quickly learned how to find girls hidden behind trap doors or false walls. She also learned how to protect the rescued girls from writs of habeas corpus, a legally sanctioned ploy wherein slave owners would accuse a girl of a crime and have her removed from the Mission Home.

In April 1906, the great San Francisco earthquake and fire forced Donaldina and her girls out of the Mission Home but she braved the fire and the military police and retrieved the girls' records that gave her guardianship rights. While the records were saved the Mission Home itself was destroyed. In 1908, the Home was rebuilt at the same site, 920 Sacramento Street and still stands today in San Francisco's Chinatown.

Donaldina continued to fight for the freedom of Chinese girls and women in the courts, at the podium, and to perform rescues in towns across the country until her retirement in 1934. While she was not the only force, Donaldina Cameron is credited with breaking the back of the Chinese slave trade in the U.S., and the rescue and education of nearly 3,000 girls and women. In 1942 the home was renamed "Donaldina Cameron House." and today it is a family service organization serving low income Asian immigrants.

Donaldina died in Palo Alto in 1968 and was buried at the Evergreen Cemetery in Los Angeles, just a few steps from the Chinese Shrine. On April 4, 2009, the Chinese Historical Society of Southern California held its annual Ch'ing Ming ceremony at the Evergreen and paid special tribute to Donaldina Cameron.
