Asian America - The Ken Fong Podcast

At our last meeting, Rev. Ken Fong shared with us anecdotes about his family, his life, his church, and his work in the Asian American community through the "Asian American Podcast". Rev. Fong began with stories of his own family's journey from China to America and how his father fought in WWII. Rev. Fong explores the issues and topics at the forefront of the Asian American community on his Asian American Podcast. Every week, Rev. Fong interviews prominent figures in the Asian American community to explore topics ranging from culture, art, history, and spirituality and these interviews are available now at asianamericapodcast.com/

If you enjoy Asian American Podcast, please show your support by rating it on iTunes. The meeting was a great success met with positive comments and response. A great way to leave off for the summer.

Although we will not have monthly meetings for July and August, the CHSSC will continue to host our annual Pilgrimage to Yosemite and Sing Peak from July 22 – July 27. And on August 27, 2016 we will have our annual Golden Spike Awards fundraiser (see next page for more info).

JULY 2016

2016 Golden Spike Awards

Each year, CHSSC recognizes the pioneers, players and purveyors of our history with the Golden Spike Award, named for the ceremonial spike that signified the completion of the First Transcontinental Railroad across the United States. The five recipients of the 2016 Golden Spike Awards are institutions that contribute precious chapters to our unique American epic by their direction and purpose. They deserve to be crowned the designees of this year's award theme, "Stewards of Our History."

California State University, Northridge, Asian American Studies Department, Chinatown Service Center, Los Angeles Chinatown Firecracker Run Committee, Friends of the Chinatown Library and UCLA Asian American Studies Center differ in scope and function and yet they share the common resolve to nurture, inform and engage.

Last year, CHSSC's multi-generational family of supporters gathered to celebrate a major milestone: the 40th Anniversary of the Society's founding by honoring the first 106 Charter Members who paved the groundwork for growth and achievements such as the establishment of the Chinese Cultural Heritage Center in 1995 in the heart of Los Angeles Chinatown.

With your generous and ongoing support, CHSSC has been able to offer free, public, monthly meetings with speakers and programs related to Chinese American and community history; safeguard of one of the largest collections of Chinese American archaeological artifacts in the country; and mentor through scholarships and internships the future leaders of cultural history. The community respects CHSSC, as demonstrated by the use of our growing research library, expansion of our catalog of publications and when its flag-carrying members and supporters open the local Chinatown New Year Parade.

Please join us for the celebration of this year's stellar company of Golden Spike recipients at the awards ceremony and luncheon and ensure CHSSC continues to have a leading voice in highlighting the important history and historical role of Chinese and Chinese Americans in Southern California.

The event will be held Saturday, August 27, 2016, at the Hilton of Los Angeles San Gabriel located at 225 West Valley Blvd., San Gabriel, CA 91776. $75 per person (CHSSC members, or tickets purchased before Wednesday July 13, 2016); $100 per person (non-members). Notes on Chinese American History

A monthly column about Chinese American History by CHSSC member, William Gow.

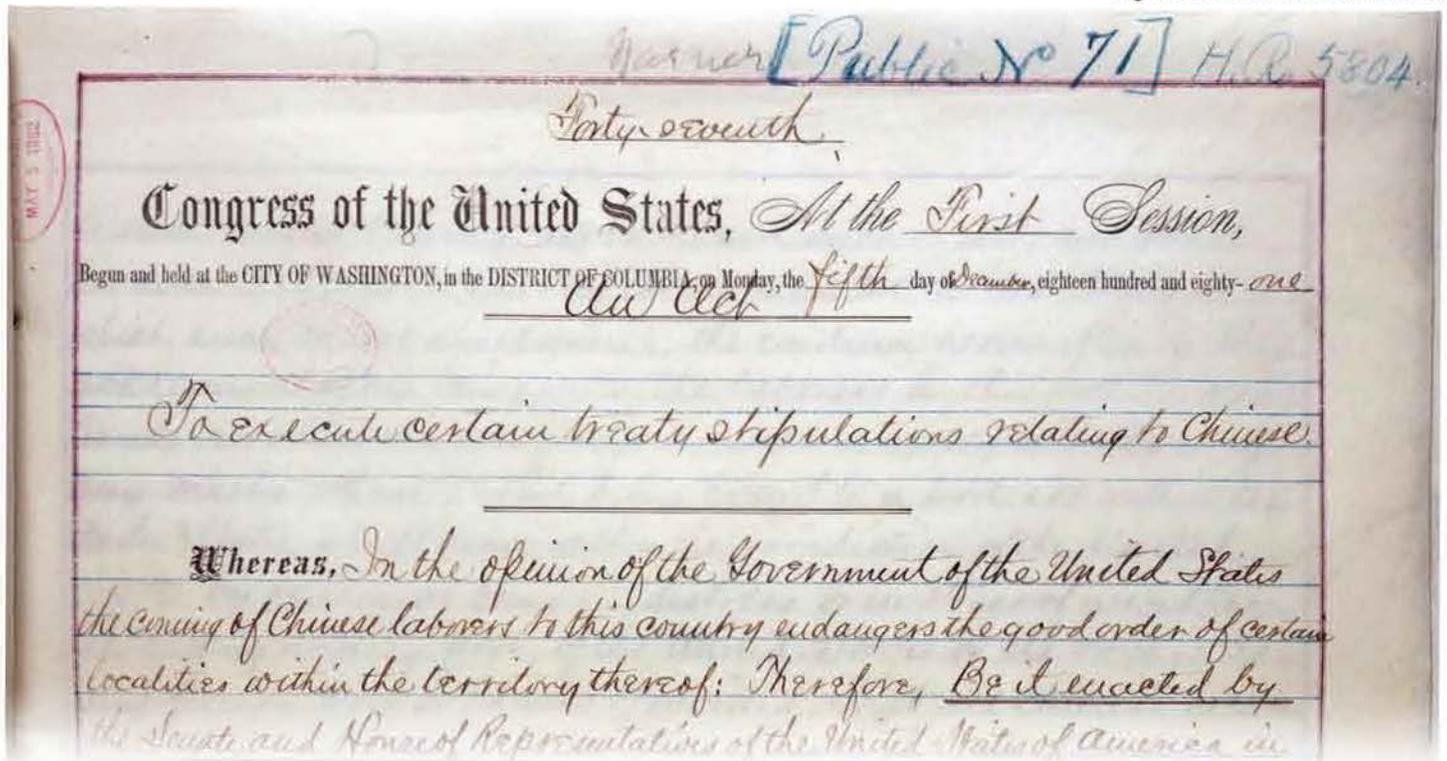

I spent eight years of my life serving as a high school and middle school history teacher in California's public schools. As a former history teacher, I have always been interested in the ways in which Asian Americans enter into the state's school curriculum. It should go without saying that history as a discipline is not simply a record of events that happen in the past, but rather a selective representation of those prior events. The stories we choose to tell about the past include implicit arguments about whose history is important to be remembered and which groups we as a society find worthy of study. In California, the topics covered in our state's history classes are dictated by the state content standards. Theoretically these standards guide what historical content is taught in classrooms beginning in kindergarten and continuing on until senior year of high school.

Asian Americans in general and Chinese Americans specifically do not have a prominent place in the school curriculum. Currently in the state standards, most of the focus of Chinese Americans comes in the fourth grade standards on California history. Here the state standards mention both the Chinese work on the transcontinental railroad and the 1882 Chinese Exclusion Act. Yet, in US history, which is taught in the fifth, eighth, and eleventh grades, Chinese Americans are not mentioned at all in the state standards. At the time of this writing, California is in the process of revising the standards for the first time in more than a decade. The committee tasked with revising the state standards has already solicited public comments for the second draft of the standards earlier in the year, and state is set to officially release the new standards sometime later in 2016.

In the latest draft of these standards, Chinese Americans are now included in frameworks for US history in both the eighth and eleventh grades. In the proposed eighth grade standards, there is mention of the role Asian farmers and farm laborers played in the development of farming throughout the state. The draft of the eighth grade standards also includes mention of the 1882 Chinese Exclusion Act and the detention of Asian immigrants on Angel Island. The proposed eleventh grade standards now mentions the Asian American Movement of the 1960s. While these changes have yet to be adopted, it appears as if the new state standards will include more places where Asian American history in general and Chinese American history specifically is included in the state's US history curriculum. This is, of course, a welcomed improvement.

At the same time, the standards remain grounded in top down factual knowledge, which does not allow as much room for individual students to determine the direction of the content as it could. As an educator my own favorite projects were always those that involved oral history with ones relatives or that asked students to place their own families and communities within the frameworks adopted by the state. It is important for all students, but in particular students of color like Chinese Americans, to see that history is not something that happens outside of themselves but rather to understand that history is something that we as individuals and communities have the ability to influence everyday of our lives.

Cave Temples of Dunhuang - Buddhist Art on Silk Road

The Mogao Grottoes, located near the town of Dunhuang in the Gobi Desert of northwest China, comprise some 500 decorated Buddhist cave temples dating from the 4th to the 14th century. Filled with exquisite wall paintings and sculptures, the caves bear witness to the intense religious, artistic, and cultural exchanges along the Silk Road, the trade routes linking East and West. Featuring numerous objects originally from the site—such as paintings and manuscripts that have rarely, if ever, traveled to the United States, as well as three spectacular full-size cave replicas. The exhibition celebrates more than 25 years of collaboration between the Getty Conservation Institute and the Dunhuang Academy to preserve this UNESCO World Heritage Site.
